Couture for Cheekbones

By LINDA CONTE

Published: March 28, 2004

If you still have an eye for fashion, despite having aging eyes, don't despair. Today's over-the-counter reading glasses — the nonprescription kind — bear little resemblance to the saucer-sized magnifiers of yore. Bold in both color and design, they can be found everywhere from Macy's to your local drugstore, starting at about $5.

For one-stop shopping, EyeSave.com carries "readers" from 13 manufacturers in hundreds of styles, enough to build an accessory wardrobe without dropping a bundle. The styles at left are, from top, Round, by Asset Eyewear ($7.99); Hand-Painted readers, from Calabria ($19.99); Mojo, by Scojo Vision ($34.99); Eileen, by Able Vision ($18.99); and Woolf, also by Calabria ($25.99).
